Mr. Riddie—"Yes, sir; and a woman has a right to wear trains and dounce."

Mr. Eldrioge—"But she'rs not obliged to."

Mrs. Hooker—"Mr right comes with mry birth, but it is in the power of the State to say at what age I shall endy it. The State is bound to put me on an equality with every other sian or woman in the State."

Mr. Riddie then proceeded to discuss the right. of, women to vote under the Fitteenth amondment, and claimed that women of all colors got the right to vote at the same lima the colored mad did. Woman now owned mothing, not even the children she brought into the world with pangs that would till the whole he race. The amendment declared that persons should vote without regard to cloir or previous condi-

MRB. SUSAN B. ANTHONY was so glad to see many here who had persecuted Congress as long as she had. She saked, in the name of the rights to womanhood and reconstruction, the committee would report in favore entruching woman under the amendant surrendy made the had been hele, and she saked Mr. Butler—pointing to General Rutter—though she had never seen him before, but had always gloried in him since he used the word contraband to say contraband for the woman. [Laughter, and stretching of teeks all over the room to see Gen. Butler.] She wanted to bring the question of ruffinge b fore the popte in a tampible and practicable way, and hored it would be brought to the attention of the House next week and incrousely diseased.

The hour of 12 o'clock having arrived the committee adjourned, and the ladies spent a few mituates in conversation with members of the committee, and evidently seemed deligated at the streaments of their champlons.

The 8t. Croix and Barelle Tand grant bill, which was pushed out of its regular order yesterday by the 8an Domingo resolution discussion, will come up for consideration to-morrow. Its fri not are confident of its passage, but the known opposition to the measure in strong quarters renders its fate very uncertain. One of the priscipal objections ursed against it is, that its passage would let loose a perfect flood of land grant bills on both Houses.

> a warm support of all the ultraisms of the The present low rate of interest is driving out of Kentucky all the available ommercial life in a way that mus lead to ultimate bankruptcy. We have to compete with higher rates of interest all around us. Our laws forbidding more than six per cent, moneyed men take their money elsewhere and distant financiers give us the go by. The result is an inces-sant drainage without any corresponding sant drainage without any corresponding supply. A conventional rate of interest is demanded to save the fiscal system of Kentucky from destruction. This conventional interest will not make money dearer. It will make it cheaper. It will make it cheaper. It will make it cheaper. It when also by inviting it from abroad. At least five millions of Kentucky money are five millions of Kentucky money are driven off every year by the present rate of interest. The people are thus five millions poorer than they ought to be. But with a conventional interest bill these five millions would be kept where they belong and five millions more of foreign money

State and County Revenue.

NAL of the 4th inst recommended a meet of the Sheriffs of the various countles Frankfort, on the 15th, to devise so upon a very important matter. Our revenue statutes, as they stand, work much irjustice, and fall grievously short of their aim in not enforcing a prompt payment of the State as well as the county revenue. There is not, nor bas there ever been, a penalty sufficient to make a would-be de-lifiquent pay his tax.

Let us take an instance that occurs again and again every year in every county in the Commonwealth. Mr. B gives to the assessor, as his list of property, five hun-ored acres of land, valued at $7,000, the tax on which for the State is 45 cents, and tor the county, say 80 cents on the hundred dollars. Mr. B, when called upon by the Sheriff or collector, tails or refuses to pay his tax. The officer, from the fact that he cannot sell real estate under the statutes to make him pay, returns his list to the County Court, as the law requires; the court sends it to the Auditor of the State, who, after adding 50 per cent. as penalty or interest, as it is called, sends it back to the officer for collection. Mr. B is informed of the fact, and gensir. B is informed of the fact, and gen-crously comes forward and pays $31 50 as tax and $15 75 interest, amounting in all to $47 25, instead of $87 50, which was the amount including the county tax. The county by this process is left in the lurch for its revenue; for there is the end of the matter, and no doubt B is well theread and will tell his neighbors of his cleased, and will tell his neighbors of his successful financiering, and they will prob-ably tollow his example.

This is not a rare case, but occurs in every county in the State, as every collect ing officer of any experience can certify. The next year the County Court takes in to account B's delinquency, and increase tle levy upon the property of all who are unfortunately afflicted with a desire to ettle promptly their tax as well as other compensation allowed for collecting the State and county revenue, to employ dep-utics enough to collect by levying upon, advertising and selling the property of all elinquents. It would be an endless job, and do but little good if done, from the fact that, on account of the absence of any pen-alty, they would buy their ewn property on day of sale, or pay their tax and politely ask the officer to come and do the same

There can be no injustice in requiring all citizens alike to pay their taxes. Then let our Legislature at this session revise the statutes in regard to this. Let them make a penalty sufficiently severe and practical in its operations to compel every one to pay with reasonable promptitude his taxes, both to the State and county in which he lives. But by no means let the officer have any share in the penalty, as was the case in the law in force for two years during 1865-6, allowing the officer to collect an additional 10 per cent. on all lists not paid by a certain day. This law did no good, from the fact that no officer had the courage to collect it. Let the pen alty go to the benefit of the State and county entirely, and place it beyond the discretion of the officer. Make it 50 per cent., at least. Let him sell land as well as any other species of property. Compel every officer to advertise thoroughly in his county paper, or in every voting precinct in nty, the place and time he will meet both officers and tax-payers to do their whole duty in this respect, or incur a heavy and inevitable penalty; and, after one year's time, it is reasonable to suppose that there will be but few acts passed for the benefit of sheriffs, while now there are many and increasing every year. FINE ART.

"The Finding of Ophelia"?—Webber's
New Picture at Eccoti's Gallery.
There is now on "xhibition at Me. Second France uniform, in this city, a painting entitled 'The Finding of Ophelia," by Mr. 1. 0. Webbar, of Cincinant, which is remarkable as embodying
a high aim and lofty conception, and as being,
on the whole, a successful cibor in a department of fine art too little practiced or encouraged in this country.

of the art toe little practice of encouraged in this country. Ophelia is represented simply and chastely draped, lumeousle's after being taken from the chantel of the brook and about to be laid gently and tenderly on the bask by two mem-one an old man, who is lowering the upper portion of the body, and the other a south, who is about to rest the freet on the earth. A secondary group, consisting of a woman and chils (the introduction of which the beautiful simplicity of the picture might, perhaps, have well spared, crowds rather closely on the principal figures. In commaring this picture with the works of suon massers of composition as Paul belarcche, we perceive a silent suffaces and formality in the grouping. This fault, however, is the more pardonable, as it is evidently the result of rigin analytical study of detail, which spite concessions to grace and freedom. Although this may be said of the composition as

ity. The brook, conraing in wine sweeps, appris to empty hin a piece of water to the left of picture. Although exception might be taken to the six is a discovered by the six of the left of the six is down which Ophelia's head throws on a reduced the six of the left of the several porcess of the figures, considered liadidually, are almost all very carefully a distributily delineated, but when lewed in connection with the cattre figure, he seems to us to be somewhat out of proportion. Thus, Ophelia's bead is well draws, as is itso the lower portion of the body; but the bosom is defective in modeling, and both it and the right shoulder are much less, accurately frester, while the arms are not in keeping with the size of the figure. As a most effective and the head of the old man, as we may instance the head of the old man, as we may instance the head of the old man, as we may instance the head of the old man, as we may instance the head of the old man, as we may instance the size of the figure. As a most effective and could exarcely be improved. With a parity of purpose, with which we are wholly in sympathy, the artist has left none of the fannastic garlands on the corpect, thus doing much to remove any feeling of horror which might otherwise be surgested to the mind, and leaving us to infer that, as the water had swept all tness away, so death had restored the clouded soul to its full beauty and purity.

As a whol's the picture is a noble effort in the right direction, showing deep thought, carreful suddy, and such consciounique work as cannot be too highly commended to the attention of all our artists. Whatever faults may be in the execution, it needs but a glance at what has been achieved to give an assurance that it is quitte within the range of Mr. Webber's ability to goard against and remedy them. While Mr. Bloom was very controots in his temarks, he was, nevertheless, very pointed. That he understood the subject thoroughly was mainfest, and that his business was sufering by the present freight tariffs was most positively asserted. Mr. Bloom had great personal regard for the officers of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, believed they were taking proper care of the inserest of the stockholders, and ilhought positily were a little too much absorbed with their duties in that direction, and on sufficiently salve to the interests of merchants.
